YOUR WINNING NUMBERS: 11, 44 & 80
Did you know?

College admissions officers want to see you've been challenging yourself. They look at the number and difficulty of courses you take to predict how well you'll do in college.

So stay on top of those credits. Talk to your guidance counselor to make sure you're taking the right classes to earn the credits you need.

If you've fallen behind, schedule an appointment with your guidance counselor right away. Talk to your teachers about opportunities to make up work and get back on track, and check out the credit recovery programs available at your school.

Remember: 11 credits a year, 44 credits to graduate. Minimum grades of 80. If you've got all three, you're good to go.
